Business Interest Limitation

Tax Cuts and Jobs Act's Creation of the Limitation

On December 22, 2017, the federal Tax Cuts and Jobs Act ("the TCJA") was signed into law. This federal tax reform legislation substantially changed the federal income taxation of individuals and businesses. One of the provisions that impacted certain businesses was a limitation on the deductibility of business interest. Under the TCJA, the deduction of business interest is generally limited to the sum of business interest income, 30 percent of adjusted taxable income, and floor plan financing interest ("the business interest limitation"). Any business interest that is disallowed because of this business interest limitation is treated as business interest paid or accrued in the following taxable year, and may be carried forward indefinitely, subject to certain restrictions.

The business interest limitation does not apply to certain taxpayers including small businesses that have annual gross receipts for the three-taxable-year period ending with the prior taxable year equal to or less than $25 million. In addition, real property and farming businesses may opt out of the new limitation if they use the alternative depreciation system to depreciate certain property used in their businesses.

Virginia's Conformity to the Limitation and Allowance of a Deduction

During the 2019 Session, the General Assembly enacted legislation generally conforming to the TCJA, including the federal business interest limitation. In addition, the legislation allowed a state-specific deduction beginning with Taxable Year 2018 to individuals and corporations subject to the federal business interest limitation. The state-specific deduction is equal to 20 percent of the amount of business interest that is disallowed as a deduction under the business interest limitation. The effect of this state-specific deduction is to accelerate a taxpayer's ability to claim their business interest for Virginia income tax purposes by allowing a larger aggregate deduction during the year in which interest expense is paid or accrued than is allowed on the federal return. However, in future taxable years, taxpayers are required to reconcile this acceleration on their Virginia income tax returns.

Virginia's Deconformity from CARES Act's Suspension of the Limitation

On March 27, 2020, Congress enacted the Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security ("CARES") Act (H.R.748). The CARES Act temporarily and retroactively increased the business interest limitation from 30 percent to 50 percent for Taxable Years 2019 and 2020. During the 2021 Session, the General Assembly enacted legislation generally conforming to the CARES Act but deconforming this provision. As a result, the business interest limitation for Virginia purposes remained at 30 percent for Taxable Years 2019 and 2020, the level set by the TCJA.

Work Group to Assess the Feasibility of Transitioning to Unitary Combined Reporting

During the 2021 Special Session I, House Joint Resolution Number 563 was passed, which directed the Division of Legislative Services, in conjunction with the Department, to establish a Work Group to assess the feasibility of transitioning to unitary combined reporting for corporate income tax purposes in Virginia. Such resolution also required the Work Group to submit a summary report with its findings and recommendations to the General Assembly.

One of the recommendations of the Work Group was that Virginia should consider easing the business interest limitation. However, the Work Group also stated that there is need to understand the exact revenue impacts involved with easing of such limitation.

Proposed Legislation

This bill would increase the Virginia individual and corporate income tax deduction for business interest to 60 percent of the business interest disallowed as a deduction under the business interest limitation. Under current law, such deduction is equal to 20 percent of disallowed business interest.

This bill would be effective for taxable years beginning on and after January 1, 2022. However, this bill would provide that it would not become effective unless the revenue change reasonably anticipated to result from the implementation of this bill is affirmatively accounted for in the total projected revenues set forth in the general appropriation act passed by the General Assembly in 2022 that becomes law.

Similar Legislation

House Bill 1006 would increase the Virginia individual and corporate income tax deduction for business interest to 30 percent of the business interest disallowed as a deduction under the business interest limitation.
